“Bailey Bryan has achieved meteoric success in only a few short years,” said Marc Caruso, CEO of Angry Mob Music. “We love everything about her music, her process, and her authenticity through all she does. We’re excited to bring her into our family and build her career even further.”

“The Angry Mob family has been so welcoming and accepting of me and my music,” said Bryan. “It’s really empowering to work with good people who genuinely care about their writers and the art that we’re making, I’m so excited to continue creating with their support!”

“Bringing Bailey into our family at Angry Mob is only going to elevate the music we’re creating,” said Ralph Torrefranca, Senior Director A&R, Angry Mob Music. “Her story building, and her immaculate talent are going to bring incredible new releases and we’re excited to hear them with everyone else.”

Hailing from a small town in Washington State, Bailey Bryan is an L.A.-based artist who developed her own sound and style by tapping into an eclectic mix of influences including the '90s R&B her mother raised her on, the underground hip-hop scene in nearby Seattle, and the highly refined country songwriting she began exploring upon moving to Nashville where she signed with 300 Entertainment and Warner Music. She released her debut album Fresh Start in 2021, amassing millions of streams, and followed up with her first major hit in 2022 with the single “MF” ft. 24Goldn achieving nearly four million streams in two months and landed on 33 New Music Friday playlists across the globe. Her newest EP released in April under Firebird Music, Sensitive Bad Bitch Music Vol. 1, is a six-track EP that finds Bryan speaking her truth with more power and impact than ever before.
